

“I found a label on my products, and it’s freaking me out!”

If you're reading this right now, it means you're a resident of California and someone who is about to enjoy some delicious, nutritious, and clean nutritional supplements from Life's Abundance.

Lucky you!

If you've already received your products, you might have noticed a sticker with this message added to the nutrition panels:

“WARNING: This product contains a chemical known to the State of California to cause cancer or birth defects or other reproductive harm.”

Most Californians (and even a lot of people who live outside the state) know all about Prop 65, and they know it's no big deal most of the time.

But if you've never seen it before, you might be super freaked out. I know I would be!

Let me help ease your worry with a short history and explanation of Prop 65.

"Proposition 65, the Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986, was enacted as a ballot initiative in November 1986. The Proposition was intended by its authors to protect California citizens and the State's drinking water sources from chemicals known to cause cancer, birth defects or other reproductive harm, and to inform citizens about exposures to such chemicals. Proposition 65 requires the state to maintain and update a list of chemicals known to the state to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity." Source: [CA.gov]

"But what started as a good idea and a list of 30 chemicals has ballooned to over 800 substances and created a huge problem with lawsuit abuse, extortion, misleading labels, and ineffective reform." [Source: sunfood.com/sunfood-prop-65]

Important: A Proposition 65 warning does not necessarily mean a product is in violation of any product-safety standards or requirements. If you haven't noticed this label on other products in your pantry, it may be because the company has chosen not to comply and pay fines instead. This is a very common practice in the industry. It doesn't mean the products are dangerous or the companies are bad—they just don't want to be negatively affected by a flawed policy.

Long story short—your products are safe. Life's Abundance nutritional supplements are among the cleanest and highest quality available to the public. The company is committed to complying with Prop 65 as they are with every law, so every product shipped to California will carry the label.
